

INTERNATIONALIZATION in HIGHER EDUCATION

Internationalization in Higher Education offers a critical and interdisciplinary exploration of how higher education is being reshaped by an increasingly interconnected world. Moving beyond the traditional emphasis on student and academic mobility, this volume examines internationalization through diverse geographical, cultural, disciplinary, and historical perspectives. Bringing together scholarly insights and experiences from different countries, the book explores key dimensions of internationalization, including knowledge production, cultural exchange, language and translation, the experiences of international students, inequality and inclusion, as well as its philosophical, ethical, and political foundations. It also considers emerging technologies and new pathways for global collaboration. By bringing these diverse perspectives into dialogue, the volume highlights both the challenges and possibilities of internationalization in practice. It invites readers to consider a fundamental question: can internationalization make higher education not only more global, but also more just, inclusive, and of higher quality?
